

The North Atlantic Right Whale

By Lucas

Where do they come from?

The North Atlantic Right Whale originates from the Atlantic coastal waters on the continental shelf and is the place they are most commonly found. The closest countries to it are France, Spain and Portugal.

How and why North Atlantic Right Whales are becoming extinct

The main reasons that this species are becoming extinct are when people are fishing and the nets and ropes get tangled on the whale and they soon die from breathing issues. Many boats are hitting them mostly by accident but it needs to stop now!
